LAND FOR SALE.

THAT well known Tract called WEST-POINT, situate in the lower end of King William County, and bounded by York, Mattapony and Pamunkey Rivers, containing nearly 3000 acres.

To be minute in delineating the many and great natural advantages attached to this land, would be superfluous, as strangers would view it before they purchase; & those who are acquainted with it, want no further information. It may not however be improper to say, that as to fertility of soil, benefit of navigation, and the advantage of fish, oysters and wild fowl, it is not exceeded by any tract of land in Virginia. This land will be disposed of by Public Sale, at West Point, on Wednesday, the first day of December next, in lots, of from three to four hundred acres, on the following terms, to wit: One third of the purchase money paid down, one third in eighteen months, and the balance in one year after the expiration of the said eighteen months; and the payments to be secured by bond and a deed of trust on the land, with interest from the day of sale.

A clear and indefeasible title will be made to the purchasers by the subscribers, who have authorized Mr. Patrick Hen-dren to attend the sale and make conveyances.

ABRIDGEMENT OF POLITICS.

To form the concatenation of events, before we present a review of the affairs of the passing week, it is necessary to recur to that part of our last retrospect which then attracted our immediate attention. After some relative remarks on the relative situation of the French Republic, so as regarded the indemnities in Germany, the disposition of Switzerland &c. were advancing to investigate the policy of Bonaparte, respecting his renunciation or those declarations which menaced the very existence of ALGIERS.

The continuance of whose political influence as an infamous nest of pirates, has been to degrading to the Maritime States of Europe. The First Consul has taught us to believe from avowals sanctioned by his own signature, that he had undertaken an expedition against these robbers merely to avenge the wrongs of the civilized world. Instead however, of fulfilling his promise, by the extermination of these freebooters, he artfully recedes from the principle which he laid down as the rule of his conduct. He even pleads ardently as the advocate of the Dey of Algiers.
He attributes his depredations and outrages to the want of intimacy with the laws of nations, particularly those which were more immediately connected with the interests of Europe. "They know no legal institutions (says he) different from the regulations of their own police, which permitting acts of individual violence among themselves, of course authorises such acts with respect to foreigners, and even consecrates them as acts of courage with regard to enemies!" This is a very admirable and well grounded apology for criminal excesses of every kind! What! because a man pretends to be ignorant of the distinction between right and wrong, he is therefore to be pardoned, nay justified in the violation of the laws of society in all ages and in all countries. Admit once the principle, and there is an end of every moral institution—the barriers of order and harmony are broken down—and the flood-gates of anarchy are open to the destruction of mankind! Such an excuse may be advanced with equal propriety in favor of every thief or murderer at the Old Bailey; but will the judge listen to such an insult to common sense such a perversion of justice? No—Then why connive at the principle in Bonaparte which would be scouted and repudiated in the most venal counsel at the bar? He might have assigned some other cause—he might have talked openly of the sound policy of cultivating a friendship with the Dey of Algiers —he might have stated such a connection as very useful to the future interests of France—he might, in short, have done any thing, or advanced any argument, which had not a tendency to the certain overthrow of every moral and political obligation. The highwayman or assassin, when armed against Bonaparte himself, might adopt the same mode of reasoning, might attempt to justify himself on the same ground of action. Thus our enchanting dreams of the downfall of the Tyrant of Algiers prove to be the vain illusions of the moment, and Bonaparte is precluded from the glory which had been destined to the conqueror! Where is the pleasure which he had promised to himself by the emancipation of the subjects or slaves of the Dey, by the introduction of that New Light to which the French Republic is said to be so much indebted! "All is vanity and vexation of spirit," (saith Solomon) and the philanthropist, when in this memorable instance applying the proverb of the wife man to the rule of reason, will acknowledge its truth and validity.
Bonaparte afterwards, in the heyday of his pride, in the plenitude of his power, recites the Glory of the French arms in Italy, Germany, Egypt and Syria! Had he omitted their pretended glories in the two latter places, where they experienced from the brilliant achievements of our countrymen, defeat and dismay, it would have been as honorable to the First Consul's memory as to his reputation.
The Despot of Algiers, as if a disciple of Chastellard, receives Bonaparte's remittance in the most polite manner, and promises every gratification which he can desire! He appears like a school-boy (martyring under the lash, and, fearful of its repetition, offers the most implicit obedience to the will of the First Consul. There is, however an exception to the demand for the restitution of the 150 men, whom Bonaparte claims as the subjects of France.

"It has pleased God, (says the Dey) that they should perish, and that has given me much pain!" This excuse for precipitating our fellow-creatures to the shades, is as ludicrous as that of the First Consul himself in the commencement of the famous paper, when he gives a delicate hint to the Dey in these words:—For God has determined, that all those who shall be unjust to me shall be punished! I!" Such ebu-litions of nonsense might be pardoned, were it not for the impiety with which it is attempted to be forced. Gracious God!
Can we for a moment believe that Bonaparte, whose life has not been an example of purity or innocence, should be selected on earth as the Vicegerent of the Omnipotent! And can we, even in the greatest laxity of moral and religious obligations, admit, that the First Consul, as the Favorite of Heaven, is sent among men as the deputy arbiter of right and wrong, & that God has determined, that his enemies shall be punished! This assertion defies the credulity of the greatest fanat-ic, and repels the belief of those who are actuated even by the infanity of superstition! Thinking as we have always done that the friendship of the powers of Barbary may on a future occasion be very essential to the re-conquest of Egypt by the First Consul, we can easily trace the cause of this sudden adjustment of differences; and were we to see the Secret articles between Bonaparte and the Dey of Algiers, we have no doubt but that our allegations would be fully confirmed; but of the propriety of this hypothesis, we shall not at this time enter into a full examination, reserving the restitute of our deductions to the development of time.
Our proceeding observations having been extended far beyond what we originally designed.

ORIGINAL.

AUTUMN.

TO close the verdure of the year, See Autumn last of all appear—See the grave Matron once again, Approach and sadden all the plain, Before her see the songsters fly,
And hasten to a milder sky;
The fields so late in herbage clad,
All now assume a browner shade;
The meads so late array'd in green,
In various colors now are seen; Silence pervades the fields around, Where mirth and song so late were found, Where mirth and song the woodland cheer'd,
The cricket's voice alone is heard;
In every scene in vain we trace,
The recent smiles of Nature's face—These graceful smiles alike are gone, And all her vernal beauty flown.

But still, in scenes like this, the mind A charm, an ecstasy can find—Softened, refin'd, sublime, serene, It catches thought from every scene—Ranges o'er life, by fancy driven, Grows sick of earth, and scapes to heaven.

Back to the days of former years It oft recurs, when free from cares; Midst sweet amusements ever new,
The hours of youth and childhood flew;
When every scene around was bright, Beheld in Fancy's vivid light,
And every moment stole away, Impatient of the least delay; Here vainly it expects to meet,
In past events, reflections' sweet, But ah, like meteors of the eve, These visions vanish and deceive; Foil'd here, the anxious, mental eye, Looks forward to futurity, Where Fancy, with unbounded scope, Ranges around the fields of Hope, Anticipates the purest bliss, From springs whose flow is ne'er to cease, Crops, flowers, whose fragrance and whose bloom
Fall time is never to consume,
And thinks no clouds will veil the light, Or check the influx of delight;
But ah! too soon the storm will low'r, Too soon these lying hopes be o'er; Cares must with days and years increase,
And toil and sorrow banish peace.

Then be it so—Should Heaven, my friend, Labor and sorrow often send,
Link'd hand in hand, we'll keep the road That leads at least to Joy's abode; When blest; we'll interchange our bliss,
And thus increase our stock of peace;
If press'd with woe our load we'll share,

And thus divide and sooth our care;
And should dame Fortune rudely frown, Should no success our efforts crown, Should wealth's proud sons our cot despise, And view our fare with scornful eyes, Still, with a heart to Heav'n resign'd, We'll bear the lot by Heav'n assign'd, And taste a joy, in love and health,
That Miser's never drew from wealth, Why should our hearts for riches pant, Or why so dread the approach of want?
Can riches sooth the aching heart, Buy pain away, or calm its smart?
Can they relieve a mournful soul,
Or deep affliction's tear controul?
Ah! no—this Heav'nly pow'r we find Only in hearts to Heav'n resign'd.

Or why with such vast efforts try To elude the door of poverty;
Her form is frightful when afar, But brightens as it draws more near;
Neglect she feels, but 'scapes from pain, Oft leads the virtues in her train;
And tho' from palaces she's driv'n, Oft finds a peaceful home in Heav'n, True, she's a maid of humble birth, Yet once was honored high on earth.
The world's first cause, and Saviour too, Encounter'd Poverty and Woe, To prove that riches cannot give That happiness for which we strive;
To trace the path, and point the way To shores of peace and realms of day.

"Man wants but little here below," Man feels but little real woe;
'Tis treacherous Fancy, loose and vain, That opes each avenue of pain;
That still to fovereign bliss aspires, And wakes extravagant desires;
These sober prudence must destroy,
Or soon the heart is robb'd of joy; Soon tranquil pleasure fades away,
And leaves the mind to spleen and prey.

But with the friend in whom I pride, Prudence, our patron and our guide,
With health and peace, and common sense, A plain and decent competence, Down the swift stream of time we'll move, Waived by pleasure and by love, Till quitting these inclement skies,
To Heaven's serene realms we rise.

From the Morning Chronicle
Mr. Editor,

If the observations of an odd old fellow are not wholly superfluous, I would thank you to shove them into a spare corner of your paper.

It is a matter of amusement to an uninterested spectator like myself, to observe the influence fashion has on the dress and deportment of its votaries, and how very quick they fly from one extreme to the other.

A few years since, the rage was; very high crowned hats with very narrow brims, tight neckcloth, tight coat, tight jacket, tight small clothes, and shoes loaded with enormous silver buckles: the hair craped, plaited, queued and powdered:—in short, an air of the greatest spruce-ness and tightness diffused over the whole person.

The ladies, with their tresses neatly turned up over an immense cushion; wait a yard long, braced up with stays into the smallest compass, and encircled by an enormous hoop; so that the fashionable belle resembled a walking bottle.

Thus dressed, the lady was seen, with the most bewitching languor, reclining on the arm of an extremely attentive beau, who, with a long cane, decorated with an enormous tassel, was carefully employed in removing every stone, stick or straw that might impede the progress of his tortering companion, whose high heel'd shoes just brought the points of her toes to the ground.

What an alteration has a few years produced!—We now behold our gentlemen, with the most studied carelessness, and almost slovenliness of dress; large hat, large coat, large neckcloth, large pantaloons, large boots, and hair scratch'd into every careless direction, lounging along the streets in the most apparent listlessness and vacuity of thought; staring with an unmeaning countenance at every passenger, or leaning upon the arm of some kind fair one for support, with the other hand cramm'd into his breeches pocket. Such is the picture of a modern beau: this dress stuffing himself up to the dimensions of a Hercules, in his manners affecting the helplessness of an invalid.

The belle who has to undergo the fatigue of dragging along this sluggish animal, has chosen a character the very reverse: emulating in her dress and actions all the airy lightness trips along with the great laughing eye, her countenance with affability and good with kindred animation except the torpid being is either affecting the fall or is wrap up in profoun

Heavens! how chang-since I was young!—th-to contemplate a ball roeach scraping, such a thing but copperplate on both sides; no wal-measure; nothing more fee half a dozen gentle heads together, in fl-first recover a lady's fan had fallen.

But now, our youths the character of pretty greatest ambition is to —careless fellows—&c.
in the mammoth style, c-into the ball-room in a solder arm, cane in hand; the most vacant air, stop such lady as he may chohis attention: enterta-common slang of the da-the conversation of hostters, &c. until his string run out, and then loungsome other fair one with ligible jargon.

since I was young!—then how delightful to contemplate a ball room: such bowing, see half a dozen gentlemen knock their heads together, in striving who should first recover a lady's fan or snuff box that had fallen.

But now, our youths no longer aim at the character of pretty gentlemen: their greatest ambition is to be called lazy dogs —careless fellows—&c. &c. Dressed up in the mammoth style, our back saunters into the ball-room in a furtout, hat un-the most vacant air, stops abruptly before such lady as he may choose to honor with his attention: entertains her with the common slang of the day, collected from the conversation of hostlers, footmen, porters, &c. until his string of smart saying is run out, and then lounges off, to entertain some other fair one with the same unintelligible jargon.

JONATHAN OLDSTYLE.

NEWBRUNSWICK, (N. J.) Nov. 18.

The following conciliatory overtures have been made by the twenty six federal gentlemen of the legislature, to the opposite party, which were rejected. In our next we shall probably be enabled to give a more particular account of this extraordinary rejection.

We, the undersigned 26 members of the legislature, who at the late joint-meeting voted for Richard Stockton, Esq. as governor, Aaron Ogden, Esq. as senator, deeply sensible of the responsibility of our situation, and anxious at the present crisis to exhibit to our immediate constituents and to the people at large, proofs of a sincere desire to promote union in the public councils, and tranquility and efficiency in the administration of the government, have met together, and after full deliberation on the subject, have agreed that col. Martin, judge Outwater, col.
D'Vroom, Messrs. Frelinghuysen, Pierson, Cox, Clement, Vanclève, and Dunn, being nine of the undersigned gentlemen, shall be a committee of conference, to be made (if so agreed) by an equal, or any number of the 26 gentlemen who voted for Joseph Bloomfield, Esq. as governor, and John Condit, Esq. senator: which committee on the part of the undersigned, are authorized to propose and agree to the following propositions and terms in regard to the public offices, viz.

1st. That inasmuch as a vacancy will happen from this state in the senate of the United States on the fourth of March next, and therefore it would be expedient for the legislature to fill it—the members in both interests shall agree to facilitate the passage of a law, to enable the joint meeting, if so disposed, to make an appointment.

2d. That as soon as this is effected, a joint meeting shall be agreed to, to choose state and federal officers and to avoid all apprehensions of alteration in the existing members in either interest, in consequence of objection to the seats it shall be understood that no removal whatever previous to the joint meeting shall be made.

3d. As the offices of governor and senator are deemed of the first importance, and upon which the public mind is anxiously fixed, the undersigned members de-sistous to avoid the unhappy consequences which might flow from insisting on both, do therefore relinquish that ground, and consent to yield up one of those high offices in favor of the opposition interest; and further to evince their solicitude to close contention and provide for the exercise of the government and the welfare of the people, they agree to permit the twenty-six gentlemen in the opposition, to choose which of the two offices they will prefer to fill, and the undersigned will agree to accept of and nominate to the other; but it is to be understood that the right of their constituents, and the just expectations they entertain that the undersigned will never abandon both these high offices, forbid them ever to recede from the above proposition; the undersigned agree to give up one, and to give the choice to their political opponents and insist upon the other unconditionally.

4th. It will be agreed upon by the undersigned to re-appoint Mr. Salter, treasurer—the gentlemen in the opposition agreeing to re-appoint Col. Rhea, clerk of the supreme court.

5th. As to all other offices which are vacant, or may become so, the nomination to be made without stipulation, in the usual manner; the undersigned being willing however, and wishing it to be adopted as a good and general rule, to reappoint the old officers, if deemed fit for the office, and subject to no particular objection.

6th. In regard to the choice of representatives for the eighth Congress, the undersigned recommend to the committee of conference, to endeavour to agree upon some plan of a law which may ensure each political interest that equality to which it is entitled.

7th. Should the gentlemen in opposition contrary to all reasonable expectation, reject a compliance with the first and third propositions, so that no Governor or Senator shall be appointed, yet so anxious are the undersigned that the other necessary appointments should proceed, that the committee on their part is instructed to propose and consent to a joint meeting, for the purpose of choosing all other necessary officers, for executing the powers of government and laws of the land, & generally they are authorized to assent to all other reasonable arrangements, observing however, to adhere with inflexible firmness to the terms of the first and third propositions.

8th. And lastly, that the gentlemen in opposition may have full notice of this proceeding, and assured of its sincerity, and have full time to prepare an answer by the time of meeting, the committee on the part of the undersigned are requested to make a copy of this paper, and deliver it to some one gentleman in the other interest, who will communicate it to the others, and request a meeting of conference at the council room on Monday evening next, at 7 o'clock.

[Here follow the names of the twenty-six federal gentlemen.]

Alexandria Advertiser.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 24.

Extra of a letter from a respectable house in Belfast, to their correspondent in Philadelphia, dated September 11.
"Our last letters from Holland say, that the crop of Flaxseed is not only fine, but very abundant."

From Moralists and Divines we often receive admonitions on the nature, the turpitude and baneful effects of envy—It is a vice which results from the unequal lots of individuals in a state of society, and from that degree of pride which attaches to some of the most serious and well disposed people—it exists under all forms of government, but seems to exhibit features of peculiar deformity in Republics purely democratic—Never, perhaps, did it appear in a higher degree than at Athens, a city of Philosophers, of Orators and Poets. No sooner did a citizen of this democratic Republic, by distinguished services, rise to any degree of estimation among the people, than he began to feel the tooth of envy, and to be marked as a victim of popular odium—The tongue of calumny was let loose; its blighting breath withered his fairest laurels; and for services that should have entitled him to endless gratitude, he was recompensed with banishment from his country and his friends—"For" says Plutarch, in the life of Themistocles, "the ostracism, or ten years banishment, was not so much intended to punish him or that great man, as to pacify and mitigate the fury of ENVY, who delights in the disgrace of SUPERI-OR CHARACTERS, and loses a part of her rancour by their FALL."

(Com. Adver.)

From the Boston Centinel.

Mr. Russell,

The jacobin papers endeavor to break the force of the truths told of their Idol, by Callender, by insinuating that he is a drunkard, and a very worthless fellow.
Still, however, they of late justify the invitation given by Mr. Jefferson to Paine, to take up his residence in this country; and to pursue his "useful labors" therein. How much inconsistency there may be in abusing Callender for the vice they attach to him, the following Extract of a Letter from an American gentleman in France, just received may have some effect to determine. You may rely on the authenticity of the extract.

Yours, &c.

A. BOSTONIAN.

THE EXTRACT.

"Havre de Grace, Aug. 28. 1802.

"All of us have a desire to see celebrated characters, even though they are noted only for monstrous vices. But the gratification is of a different nature from that of meeting with men eminent for benevolence and philanthropy.

"I feel my curiosity satiated in having seen Thomas Paine. I have several times dined and supped at the same table with him, for that purpose. He is a drunken beastly animal, the most slovenly and dirty in his person of any man I have ever met with—His face is drunkenness personified; and one would almost suppose a candle might be lit at his long bottle nose, the effect of brandy. He can however appear like a man of sense in company, and has a strong memory. He is on his way to America, if he can find here a countryman who will disgrace himself so much as to convey him to our shores.
However, I expect he will be there shortly, by some means or other. The present government of France does not suit him.
I am informed, that on his offering to dedicate some work to Bonaparte, he declined it, letting him know at the same time, that he did not choose to receive that honor from so vile a calumniator of Washington."

An Infallible remedy for a Burn or Scald obtained of a gentleman from Germany.

Mix Sweet Oil, or if that cannot be had, fresh butter, hogs lard or any such unrefined substance, with slacked lime, the fresher the better, till the composition shall become of the consistence of paste; spread it on a linen cloth double the cloth and apply it to the wound. It will instantly relieve the patient from all pain; renew the application once in about eight hours, for a few days and the cure will be entirely effected.

N. B. This remedy is worthy to be preserved in every family.

A Good Thought.

"Though it be not in your power, said Marcus Aurelius, to be a naturalist, a poet, an orator, or a mathematician, it is in your power to be a virtuous man, which is the best of all."

"Let somebody else do it."

And why not do it yourself, without saying three words about it? You are equally interested; go and do it immediately, for if the present time is not the only time, it is always the best! and depend upon it, somebody else will not do it; they have the excuse that you have; negligence.

If a plank happens to be worn through on a bridge, "This is a scandalous place," says every body, just as they are passing over it, "it is a shame that hole should remain; the first horse that comes over it in the night, may put his foot in; then away goes his leg, or perhaps the rider's neck. Somebody ought to lay down a new plank or two," echoed from very many public & private houses in the town.
Every face expressed a heart full of sentiments so naturally excited by the occasion. All ranks of citizens vied with each other.

There is a deep rut in the road; a carriage, a load of lumber will almost turn over every time they pass; it can't be avoided; five minutes work would repair it; but 'tis not the usual time to mend roads in the spring. "I won't mend it," says one neighbour, "and I won't," says another, "I can get along as well as any body, I'll wait and let somebody else do it." It remains all Summer. A chain is unhooked, and lets the bucket fall into a town well: "What is that to me; I can get water at another place, as easy as other people; it is not more than thirty rods, and the snow is not very deep." But hark ye, is it not cheaper to hook the chain than to go a week to the spring?
"What then, it is not my well any more than it is neighbour Hobson's. I don't want to mend it for other folks; let somebody else do it."

But there is something else of more consequence which every body is willing that somebody or anybody else should do, and so no body does it. "How much wood is there upon that sled?" says a lady, as she stepped round it into the snow to guess at the quantity. Little do you know, thought I, as I was turning my horse to pass by it, or any one else, except the man who loaded it; it was a modern load brought on purpose "to sell." The sides were straight and handsome; the middle little better than a bunch of faggots or a thorn bush.

The next load I passed, was placed more artfully still; the ends were filled close with short billets, a foot and a half long, so that the hollow middle did not appear at all. "The town," said a bye-stander, as he was leaning on his cane, "ought to apply the law of the state, which makes provision, which wood is generally bought by the cord, to have it cord wood length, and the feller to produce his bill from the wood-corder before he is permitted to sell as they do in every seaport town; then a woman or a child might purchase without loss of time or imposition." "It only requires a vote of a town," says a second, "and somebody should speak to the selectmen about it."—"I would speak myself," says a third, "but perhaps some might oppose it, so I had rather somebody else do it," and there is an end to the matter.

There are sundry other omissions of a like nature, that ought to be mentioned in a good natured way; but as I have stopped so long, and am in danger of being belated, I had rather let somebody else do it.

Two undivided third parts of 7 acres of Land, upon which are a merchant mill, with three pair of French burr mill stones and every necessary, complete, for manufacturing flour to the best advantage, and with as little manual labor as possible; a brewery and distillery, a granary, a miller's house, a brewer's house, cooper's shop, &c. and a vacant mill seat.
Two undivided third parts of 200 acres of land, adjoining the 7 acres and 172 acres above mentioned, upon which here are several stone quarries and fish stands.
The purchaser of the above property, will have an assignment of a lease for the other undivided third part, of which there will be 6 years to come from the first day of September next.
The stone on the above lands is equal in goodness to any, and superior to most foundation stone on the river—veils of any burthen that can go to George-Town, can go up to the mill and stone quarries.
Any person or persons, who may incline to purchase, will of course view the premises, therefore it is not thought necessary to be more particular.
For terms apply to Gen. Uriah Forrest, at George-Town, or to PHILIP R. FENDALL,
Alexandria.
